Faithful Families: Creating Sacred Moments at Home

Silence

Listening Car Rides

Silence. Sweet, sweet silence. Many parents long for the elusive silence. Oh, to experience freedom from noisy games, chatter, and bickering! Silence, more than just a time to enjoy the absence of chaos, is a powerful tool for connecting with God. So often we speak of prayer as a time to talk to God, but if prayer is truly a conversation, we must make time to listen, too. This practice takes advantage of car rides.

In the Introduction, I spoke a bit about the need for spiritual practices to never be punitive. This is particularly important for this practice. The goal is for children, over time, to associate quiet with a sense of listening to God and peace. If parents enter in to "Listening Car Rides" in a flurry of anger, saying, "I said QUIET!" children may associate quiet with tension or punishment and come to resent it. If it is treated as something mysterious and spiritual, children may come to appreciate and embrace it.
